SATURDAY MORNING AUGUST 17 1872

What It Signifies

What the meaning of the Democratic acceptance of Horace Greeley Greeley himself and all professes to be one that it means a complete conversion and reformation of the Democratic party But do Democrats support Greeley on account of his public record Clearly not The leading features of that record are as odious to them as ever They hate the Republican party chiefly because it abolished slavery and saved the rebellion and gave the colored population equal rights with the white They support Greeley because they think they see a chance through him to defeat this party and obtain revenge for the suppression of the rebellion and the results of the war They don't follow Greeley because of any admiration for his record as an Abolitionist They don't remember his On to Richmond articles and his appeals for the prosecution of the war with any pleasure But they cherish a deep hatred of the party which gave the slave his liberty and quelled the rebellion, and nothing but this hatred and a desire for revenge could induce them to vote for Greeley Greeley is now against his party and this fact is enough for them to know They do not vote for him as a defender of the Union but as the bondsman of Jeff Davis not as a friend of emancipation but as an apologist for the Ku Klux not as a man who stood by his country in her hour of trial, but as a candidate who is now pledged to the interest of those who made war on the country and tried to overthrow its Government.

Here is the meaning, this is the spirit, of the support which the Democratic party give to Horace Greeley They do not like or admire him for any one of the acts of his life which have contributed to his fame Not less than formerly are they in their hearts haters of the measures and principles to which Greeley has devoted the greater and better part of his life. They admire him only as a renegade they praise him simply for his abjuration of principles which he has heretofore held, and support him only because they hope to "use him,"—as the Herald expresses it,—to overturn those principles and set up those of Democracy over them He consents to this, beguiled and led away by an insatiable and consuming desire for the glittering bauble which they hold before him

Herein is the full meaning of Democratic support of Greeley It does not mean at all that the results of the last twelve years are accepted by that party Directly contrary it means an insidious attempt to reverse them "using" Greeley (as the Herald says) as a means

Trumbull in Trouble

There is trouble in Illinois for the Reformers the course of Liberalism like that of love, does not run smooth A correspondent of the New York Times writes from Springfield that a pretty thorough canvass has been made of the different counties, that the defection to Greeley is surprisingly small and that the Republicans are confident of giving Grant 50 000 majority in that State It seems, too, that Senator Trumbull is having trouble with his friends in the Senate The Democrats were profuse in their promises until they had secured all the recruits likely to come to them, but now they manifest great backwardness in pledging their candidates to support Mr Trumbull There are a good many hungry Democratic statesmen who would like the place, and they object to having it bargained away in advance to a newcomer in the party In consequence a misunderstanding and coolness has arisen among the allies which threatens serious results That amalgamated "Reformer," Trumbull, is trying to purify politics by setting up and manipulating Legislative nominations in his favor "Reform" in the Greeley dictionary means intrigue of this description, and corruption in all the old ways and in a thousand new ones The celebrated Panurge had fifty two ways of making money, the most honest of which was a sly species of theft "Liberalism has counted methods of reform, the purest of which is Trumbull's game in Illinois

The Contest in Indiana

It is known that the two parties are nearly evenly divided in Indiana This makes the contest very warm But the current runs with the Republicans, who are thoroughly organized in every school district in the State and report regularly to the Central Committees. Their organization is believed to be more complete than that of either party in any other State of the Union Their lists made by school districts, contain the names of all the voters of both parties in the State and this canvass is said to show a clear Republican majority Senator Wilson who has been campaigning in Indiana recently made by no statements at the Republican headquarters in New York

In Indiana the Republicans have begun the struggle with an energy that is sweeping the State from one end to the other. I spoke in a dozen places, and everywhere the meetings were attended by immense crowds of people and the enthusiasm was such as I never witnessed before though my political experience has been pretty extensive The Republican party there mean not only not to let the election go against them by default, but to carry the country by heavier majorities than ever Our ticket will carry every free State but two I am sure and of those two there are strong very strong hopes of victory These two are New York and New Hampshire and, though the result is doubtful I think all the signs of the times points to the success of the Republicans even here, and I may say the same of New Hampshire, where the fight is always a very close one I find one very cheering sign everywhere, and that is that the vast majority of young men are Republicans In Indiana there are electioneering regiments with a regular Grant uniform, and mounted, and who are doing splendid service in animating and rousing all friends of good government to a sense of their duty All of these organizations are composed of young men, most of whom served in the war and helped to save the Union

The Democratic defection in Indiana is by no means inconsiderable A correspondent of the Chicago Inter Ocean writes from Fort Wayne

The Democrats are beginning to look annoyed They have discovered that the Republicans are far better organized than they are, and that our meetings far exceed theirs in numbers and enthusiasm, and that many of the leading men are speaking out against Greeley Jason B Brown a State Senator, holding over has turned back upon his old party, and goes for Grant and the Republican State ticket Colonel Cyrus L Dunham, of New Albany, a life long Democrat who has filled many public positions, and is now on the bench, is also reported, on Democratic authority for Grant, while Simon B Wolfe the Democratic candidate for Congress in the Second District, is against Greeley Ex United States Senator Graham N Fitch of Logansport Hon Chas Reeve, of Plymouth and Hon Edgerton, of Fort Wayne, are all out against Greeley Mr Edgerton was formerly a Democratic member of Congress from Ohio, and was the Democratic candidate for Lieutenant Governor with Hendricks four years ago There is no doubt but the Louisville Convention will have a full representation from Indiana.

When the Northern Pacific Railroad Company were permitted to amend their charter they adroitly and covertly managed it so that they should not be obliged to build their road to Portland The original act obliged them to do so The Times in an editorial review of the article shows how the thing was done When Oregon's representatives allowed additional lands from the Government to be given to the Northern Pacific Company to build to the Columbia instead of Portland and of Puget Sound they thought they were securing a great victory

The Washington Territory University at Seattle will be open for the reception of students on the third Monday in September The institution will be placed on a better basis the coming year than ever before

Instructions have been received at the Walla Walla Land Office to permit parties to go upon the lands and cut such timber as may be required for use in the settlement and development of the country Parties who may avail themselves of this permission are to pay stumpage at the rate of 50 cts.

The Seattle Intelligencer says "a gentleman just in from Walla Walla via Snoqualmie Pass reports that Yakima and Kittitas Valleys are rapidly filling up, and that crops there are everywhere abundant The road from the pass to Snoqualmie Prairie is pretty much cleared of obstructions in the shape of fallen timber, but they are in bad condition on account of being washed out in places and also very muddy On Tuesday last a heavy rain prevailed all day over the whole district between the pass and Snoqualmie Prairie

The Courier says Captain Lawson of the coast survey will proceed soon to survey the town of Olympia and harbor This will engage his attention during the coming fall and winter The work will be extensive The topography of the country bordering the Sound for six miles below Olympia will be taken and the Sound waters will be measured for the same distance An accurate survey of the town is especially needed as valuable improvements are being made and more are on foot and people want to know when they locate fences build houses and plant orchards and shade trees that they will be permanent

CITY.

Low Water—The Columbia was unusually low yesterday morning, and the Willamette was also lower than usual at this season of the year. The steamer Wilson G Hunt was detained at the mouth of the Willamette Slough for several hours, and the Ione was delayed in getting down to Portland.

Coroner's Inquest—The coroner's inquest yesterday morning at the office of Lee & Durham to enquire into the cause of the death of Joseph Bowes, was not concluded. Several witnesses were examined who stated that they had seen the deceased on the last time until the day he was seen recovered. He died on Friday and on Saturday and Sunday when he was seen in company with Simmons and Narcisse. From the evidence it appears that Bowes must have been murdered on Sunday. After several hours spent in examining as many witnesses as possible the jury brought in a verdict substantially the following verdict: We the jury empanneled to enquire into the cause of the death of Joseph Bowes find as follows: That the said Joseph Bowes was a native of Washington Territory unmarried and that he came to his death from three wounds on his body inflicted with two sharp edged instruments, on or about Sunday August 25 1872 in the hands of some unknown person or persons. Deceased was aged about 26 years.

POLITICAL MEETING.

The speaking at the Court House last night by Mrs A J Dunniway drew a full house and a large number of ladies being present.

The speaker was introduced by Mr Mannix and for about an hour and a half addressed the audience on a plan yet for the people to overcome—being frequently interrupted by the partisan hecklers who composed some of the audience. She said that she felt at home in Portland, for the first time since she left Washington Territory, for the reception accorded her by the people of Portland was very different from that which she had received in the Territory. She had been treated with coldness and contempt in the Territory, but here she was received with kindness and respect. She had been told that she had no apology to offer for appearing before such an audience as this, but she had felt that the time had come when the women of America should arise and help purify politics by the pool of politics. She told the audience then of the Steinway Hall Woman's Suffrage Convention in New York and how her proposition to hold an Amnesty Proclamation to Horace Greeley was voted down by the Convention of her appointment to visit him in his sanctum and her interview with the grandmother of the Chappaqua lot. That interview has been given to the public through the columns of the New York Herald. However one idea was suggested in the interview which contains the truth. Mrs Dow was asked by Greeley how she thought the election in Oregon would go this year and she told him she Democrats had carried it the last election and she thought that the Republicans would be successful this time. Greeley replied I guess it will go Democratic you have but few schools and a great deal of whisky on the coast.

She contended that if Greeley had ever been consistent in any one thing except his willful attack of the Democracy it had been his vindication of the Roman Catholics and offered proofs of it that were incontrovertible.

When her interview with Mr Greeley closed she regretted the hours of admittance she had given him and returned to the Convention and begged pardon for having presumed that Horace Greeley was capable of anything but deserving of statesmanship.

She described the manner in which political platforms were made and showed that upon the question of Woman Suffrage the plank of the Republican party made at Philadelphia was fully up to the standard of public opinion at this day. She alluded to her article in the New York Herald of a few months ago, entitled The Silent Man of Destiny, and said the social features of Gen Grant's life she had exposed in that article were known of him when he was a Democrat but that since Grant had become a Republican she had never heard a single word said against his moral character. Her contrast between the management of national affairs in regard to finances by the Republican Administration and the management of the same question by the Democrats of New York city was a complete refutation of the idea that these so called Liberals were in favor of reform in any shape.

She had been the recipient of many favors at the hands of Democrats, who had encouraged her in her arduous work of educating the public mind on this question of Woman Suffrage to them she appealed on the position which they occupy as supporters of Greeley and said that they were certainly disgraced by the company they were in when consorting with the crowd of Greeley tax. Her admonition to stand firm by the principles which fired the American heart in the days of the rebellion, and thus maintain the integrity of the nation was really a fine specimen of rhetorical effort. She said in conclusion that she found it somewhat difficult to get up stump-speaking steam without some opposition but like the Irishman with a new shillalah she was spoiling for a fight and hoped before the campaign closed to have another opportunity of addressing the citizens of Portland. There were many good points made by Mrs Dunniway in her speech which want of space compels us to pass over and we would advise all who can to go and hear her when she shall again afford them the opportunity. The meeting was in every respect a success and the speech was well received throughout.

THREE BRAVE MEN.

Pretty Barbara Ferros would not marry. Her mother was in consternation. "Why are you so stubborn, Barbara?" she asked. "You have plenty of lovers."

"But they do not suit me," said Barbara, coolly tying her curls before the mirror.

"Why not?"

"I want, when I marry, a man who is brave—equal to any emergency. If I give up my liberty, I want to be taken care of."

"Silly child! what is the matter with big Barney the blacksmith?"

"He is big, but I never heard that he was brave."

"And you never heard that he was not. What is the matter with Earnest the gunsmith."

"He's as placid as goat's milk."

"That is no sign he is a coward. There is little Fritz, the tanner; he is quarrelsome enough for you surely."

"He is no bigger than a bantam cock. It is little he could do if the house was set upon by robbers."

"It is not always strength that wins a fight, girl. It takes brain as well as brawn. Come, now, Barbara, give these fellows a fair trial."

Barbara turned her face before the mirror, letting down one raven tress, and hooking up another. "I will, mother," said she at last.

That evening Ernest, the gunsmith, knocked at the door.

"You sent for me, Barbara," he asked, going to the girl, who stood upon the hearth, coquettishly warming one foot and then the other.

"Yes, Ernest," she replied. "I've been thinking of what you were saying the other night when you were here."

"Well, Barbara?"

Ernest spoke quietly, but his dark blue eyes flashed, and he looked at her intently.

"I want to test you."

"How?"

"I want to see if you dare do a very disagreeable thing."

"What is it?"

"There is an old coffin up stairs. It smells of mold. They say Redmund, the murderer, was buried in it, but the devil came for his body and left the coffin empty at the end of a week, and it was finally taken from the tomb. It is up stairs in the room my grandfather died in, and they say grandsire does not rest easy in his grave, for some reason—though that I know nothing about. Dare you make that your bed to-night?"

Ernest laughed. "Is that all? I will do that and sleep soundly. Why, pretty one, did you think I have weak nerves?"

"Your nerves will have a good proof if you undertake it. Remember, no one sleeps in that wing of the house."

"I shall sleep the sounder."

"Good night, then. I will send you a lad to show you to your chamber. If you stay there until morning," said the imperial Barbara, with a nod of her pretty head, "I will marry you."

"You vow it?"

"I vow it."

Ernest turned straightway and, followed the lad in waiting through dim rooms and passages, up echoing stairs, along narrow, damp ways, where rats scuttled before them, to a low chamber. The boy looked pale and scared. Earnest made him stay till he took a survey of the room by the aid of his lamp. It was very large and full of recesses, with high windows in them, which were barred across. He remembered that old grandsire Ferros had been crazy several years before his death, so that this precaution had been necessary for the safety of himself and others. In the center of the room stood a coffin; beside it was placed a chair. The room was otherwise perfectly empty.

Ernest stretched himself in the coffin. "Be kind enough to tell Miss Barbara that it's a good fit," said he. The boy went out, and shut the door, leaving the gunsmith alone in the dark.

Meanwhile Barbara was talking with the blacksmith in the keeping room.

"Barney," said she, pulling her hands away from his grasp when he would have kissed her. "I've a test to put you to before I ... you my answer. The ... ying in the ... s wing of the house. If you dare sit with it there all night, and let nothing drive you from your post, you will not ask me to marry you in vain."

"You will give me a light and a bottle of wine, and a book to read?"

"Nothing."

"Are these all the conditions you can offer me, Barbara?"

"All. And if you get frightened you need never look me in the face."

"I'll take them, then."

So Barney was conducted to his post by the lad who had been instructed in the secret, and whose voluntary stare at Ernest's placid face, as it lay in the coffin, was like a corpse. He took his seat, and the boy left him alone with the darkness, rats and the coffin.

Soon after young Fritz, the tanner, arrived, flattered and hopeful, from the fact that Barbara had sent for him. "Have you changed your mind, Barbara?" he asked.

"No; I shall not until I know that you can do a very brave thing."

"What shall it be? I swear I shall satisfy you, Barbara."

"I have a proposal to make you. My plan requires skill as well as courage."

"Tell me."

"Well, in this house is a man watching a corpse. He has sworn not to leave his post until morning. If you can make him do it, I shall be satisfied that you are as smart and as brave as I require a husband to be."

"Why, nothing is so easy!" exclaimed Fritz. "I can scare him away. Furnish me with a sheet, show me the room, and go to your rest, Barbara. You will find me at the post in the morning."

Barbara did as he required, and saw the tanner step blithely away at his task. It was then nearly twelve o'clock, and she sought her own chamber.

Barney was sitting at his vigil, and so far all had been well. The night seemed very long, for he had no means of counting the time. At times a thrill went through him, for it seemed as if he could hear a low suppressed breathing not far away, but he persuaded himself that it was the wind blowing through the crevices of the old house. Still it was lonely, and not at all cheerful.

The face in the coffin gleamed whiter than ever through the darkness. The rats squeaked as famine were upon them and smelled flesh. The thought made him shudder. He had got up and walked around, but something made a slight noise as if somebody was behind him, and he put his chair with the back against the wall and sat down again. He been hard at work all that day, and in spite of everything he grew sleepy. Finally he nodded and snored.

Suddenly it seemed as if somebody had touched him. He awoke with a start and saw nobody near him, though in the center of the room stood a white figure. "Curse you! get out of this!" he exclaimed, in a tone of fright, using the first words that came to his tongue. The figure held up its right arm and slowly approached him. He started to his feet. The spectre came nearer, passing him in the corner.

"The devil take you," cried Barney in his extremity.

Involuntarily he stepped back; and the figure advanced, coming near and nearer, and extending both arms as if to take him in a ghostly embrace. The hair started up on Barney's head, he grew desperate, and as the gleaming arms would have touched him he fell upon the ghost like a whirlwind, tearing off the sheet, thumping, pounding, kicking and beating more and more at the resistance he met, which told him the truth.

As the ... knows, Barney was big and Fritz was little, and while pummeling the little tanner unmercifully Fritz was trying to lunge at Barney's stomach to take the wind out of him, both plunging and kicking like horses, they were petrified to hear a voice cry, "Take one of your size, big Barney."

Looking around they saw the corpse sitting up in his coffin. This was too much. They released each other and sprang for the door. They never knew how they got out, but they ran home like panting stags.

It was Barbara herself who came and opened the door upon Ernest the next morning. "It is very early, one more nap," said he, turning over in the coffin.

So she married him; and though she sent Barney and Fritz invitations to the wedding, they did not appear. If they discovered the trick they kept the knowledge to themselves, and never willingly faced Barbara's laughing eyes again.

Petroleum as Used by the Indians in the Early Days.

The following account of the use of petroleum by the Indians for religious purposes in the early days of Pennsylvania we find in the Venango Spectator. It was written upwards of thirty years ago by either Judge Thompson or Rev. Cyrus Dickson, who then resided in Franklin:

The other use made of the oil was for religious worship. Here I cannot better describe it than in the imaginary language of the commandant of Fort Duquesne to his Excellency General Montcalm, the unfortunate hero of Quebec. "I would desire" says the commandant, "to assure your Excellency, that this is a most delightful land. Some of the most astonishing natural wonders have been discovered by your people. Whilst descending the Allegheny, fifteen leagues below the mouth of the Conowango, and three above Fort Venango, we were invited by the Chief of the Senecas to attend a religious ceremony of his tribe. We landed, drew up our canoes on a point where a small stream entered the river. The tribe appeared unusually solemn. We march up the stream about half a league, where the company, a large band it appeared, had arrived some days before us. Gigantic hills begirt us on every side. The scene was really sublime. The great Chief then recited the conquests and heroism of their ancestors. The surface of the stream was covered with a thick scum, which bursts into a complete conflagration. The oil had been gathered and lighted with a torch or brand. At the sight of the flames the Indians gave forth a triumphant shout that made the hills and valley re-echo back again." Here, then, is revived again the story of the ancient fire-worshipers of the East. Here, then, are the children of the sun. The fame of these springs is greater in France and England than in America; greater in distant cities of the Union than in Franklin, only nine miles distant from them.
